BELOW: If your kitchen space requirements and budget are top priorities, you still can have the kitchen of your dreams with the latest appliances by Kitchenaid.

1. ASSESS YOUR NEEDS.

As the saying goes, "To thine own self, be true." When designing a kitchen, Mary Kathryn Reese, co-owner of Kitchen Design Concepts in Carrollton, says homeowners first should determine if the kitchen needs a reface, replace or redesign. Also consider how long you will be staying in the home. "This will help you determine the scope of the investment you will want to make," she says.

A homeowner's personal, unique life situation and lifestyle are the most important things that should influence a kitchen design. "You need to anticipate not only what you need now, but also five to 15 years from now," Reese says. "For example, many baby boomers we talk with anticipate having a parent move in with them within the next five years, so special consideration needs to be given to that life change."

These considerations can help you determine the types of kitchen appliances, floor plan and materials that make sense for your kitchen.

2. DECIDE ON A BUDGET.

A detailed budget helps narrow the selection of materials and appliances. High-end commercial-style appliances such as Sub-Zero refrigerators and Le Cornu ovens are in vogue, but GE's Profile Series and models by Kitchenaid offer a similar look for much less.

Granite and marble are stunning, but tile and Formica in stone finishes suit a more modest budget. Hand-forged hardware for cabinets is expensive, but attractive options are available in lower price ranges at hardware stores such as The Home Depot.

3. PAY ATTENTION TO THE WORK TRIANGLE.

The work triangle is used by architects and designers to help clients plan their kitchens in the most efficient and functional manner. The idea is to create three separate areas for food prep, food storage and food cooking in the shape of a triangle, with no distance longer than 9 feet or shorter than 4 feet. Today's triangle can be adapted to include microwaves and drawer refrigerators that further improve the work flow.

4. CHOOSE A STYLE AND COLOR PALETTE.

Today, kitchens are open to the rest of the home. Balance wall colors and cabinet styles with the décor of adjoining spaces. Creative use of color can define kitchen spaces and help rooms flow together.

5. CONSIDER THE CABINETS.

Designs are evolving in the world of cabinets. Chip Hornbeek, owner of Chip's Custom Cabinets in Arlington, says many of his clients want rich, warm craftsman-style cabinetry. "It's trendy to make cabinets look like furniture pieces, with an island that looks completely different from the rest of the cabinets," he says.

PKI in Dallas specializes in custom furniture and upper-end contemporary cabinetry. Owner Philip Koch says he is seeing a trend of using darker woods and clean lines. "We also are seeing more use of glass doors, such as aluminum frame glass doors and textured glass," he adds.

Reese also is seeing a trend away from highly decorative cabinet door styles seen in traditional kitchens in favor of the simple, clean lines of transitional styles.

As more appliances are added to kitchens, they can be covered with panels to resemble cabinets, while others prefer the look of stainless steel appliances.

In very high-end designs, Reese says full-extension drawers, full-extension roll-out trays in lower cabinets with door fronts and soft-close doors are all the rage.

6. COUNTER POINTS.

Hornbeek reports that granite continues to be the choice of counter surface for more than 90 percent of his customers. "Granite is the best bang for the buck," he says, adding that he encourages clients to go to the stone yard to look at entire slabs. "About half of my customers have picked their slabs and have requested a specific vein in the slab."

Marble such as Carrara White is gaining popularity, even though it's a softer stone that shows wear. "I recently did a kitchen where we did granite countertops and slabs of marble as the backsplash," Hornbeek says.

Butcher block counters, especially for island counter surfaces, are another trend Hornbeek has observed. Reese says she is seeing a growing interest in teak countertops. "They are beautiful and an environmentally friendly choice," she says.

Backsplashes are getting more creative and colorful, with everything from granite, marble, stone and glass tiles.

7. STEP ON IT.

The effort and expense of maintenance is a practical consideration when choosing kitchen floors. If you have an active Labrador and young children running around the kitchen in soccer cleats, wood floors will get scratched. Sealed tile is easy to mop, but might crack. Slate and stone are sturdy and easy to care for, but they need resealing every five years or so.

Environmentally friendly floors such as bamboo and Marmoleum are good choices when thinking "green." Homeowners increasingly choose the same floor surface for kitchen and living spaces, which results in ease of maintenance and better flow.

8. LET THERE BE LIGHT.

"One of the most frequent complaints we hear from folks is about their current kitchen lighting," Reese says. "It can be a safety thing if a client plans to stay in a house long-term. Good illumination is appropriate for them as they age so all surfaces and flooring are well lit."

Fluorescent light is out. Natural light and windows feature prominently in new kitchens. Many homeowners want a view of landscaped gardens. Others want to watch young children play outside while they cook. Today's kitchens usually feature only two walls with cabinets, as opposed to the four-walled kitchens of our parents' homes, creating an "open" look.

Installed lighting is divided into task, ambient and accent lighting. Task lighting includes under-cabinet lights and over-counter pendant lights that focus on food preparation. "For under cabinet lighting, we recommend xenon or halogen," Reese says. Ambient or "mood" lighting is created by adding dimmers or sconces. Accent lights are used in cabinets for display collections. "To be energy efficient we've started looking at LED and CFL as bulb choices," Reese adds.

9. TURN ON TO NEW APPLIANCES.

The look of commercial-style appliances with stainless steel finishes is fashionable, as are appliances hidden behind panels to match cabinets. Our experts predict a boom in built-in appliances such as wine refrigerators and coffee centers, as well as "drawer" appliances such as warming drawers, refrigerator drawers and microwave drawers.

10. GATHER 'ROUND THE TABLE.

In addition to efficient workspaces, one of the most important goals of modern kitchen design is to create a comfortable gathering place. Think of cocktail parties you've attended where everyone stands in the kitchen to talk — and the living room sofas sit empty. Accept that everyone wants to be in the bustling kitchen and plan accordingly. Islands should provide unobstructed views for cooks to converse with guests.

Homeowners often desire small sitting areas near the kitchen where children do crafts and homework or where guests can relax with a drink. Televisions and fireplaces may flicker across the room. In today's thoughtfully designed homes, food preparation merges with family and friends, and the "heart" of the home doesn't miss a beat.
